“ I love you all. Ashley was a beautiful, courageous woman. I am proud that she was my cousin. Here is something I wrote from Fredda:

An Eagle for Ashley July 3, 2019

From Fredda:

Saturday at 1:00 pm, I saw a bald eagle perched up in a spruce tree from the window in the bathroom where I got a good clear view. The eagle turned around and looked in my direction, so I went outside to offer tobacco for Ashley. I asked the eagle, “wee-JOO-keh-mahn AP-eed Ashley.” (“help this woman, Ashley.”) The eagle took off and flew way high in the sky, so high she became a little dot and then disappeared. She was carrying the prayer to the Creator. Sunday morning at 9:30, the eagle came back with the message that Ashley used her hands to part the clouds and she is looking down on John and Andy and Cooper all her family and friends to let them know she is in good hands now; and she was watching herself dying. She wants to tell you she is with her mom now and both of them are watching over all of you.
